- are coalitions helpful to achieve goals?
- short-term coalitions more likely to achieve goals?
- factor most important in coalition formation?
- biggest benefit in forming a coalition?
- identity-based movements struggle to coalition?

Questions about movements: (1) coalition is important for this movement's success? (2) Has the movement participated in broad "umbrella coalitions" that bring together diverse actors? (3) Are coalition partners seen as just temporary allies? (4) Do coalition actions tend to be more effective than solo actions by the movement? (5) Are the movement's coalitions are primarily local rather than national or international? (6) Does the movement have supportive allies in one or more political party?

Poll results (Respondents: 1)

Are coalitions helpful to achieve goals?

What are the advantages and disadvantages for movements of forming a coalition/collaborating with other actors?

Poll results - why coalition short-term, limited coalitions more likely to achieve goals?

most important benefit for a movement in forming a coalition?

What factors enable/hinder coalition formation?

Poll results - coalition how factor most important in facilitating coalition formation?

identity-based movements struggle more to form coalitions?

Why movements make coalitions

Coalitions...

- help build/enhance networks
- increase resource availability
 - boost mobilisation potential (again, networks)
- expand tactical repertoires

Types of coalitions

Some coalitions may be enduring; others may be event coalitions

Types of coalitions

Some coalitions may be enduring; others may be event coalitions

Peace protest, Berlin, 2022-02-27

Van Dyke and Amos (2017) identify five factors critical to coalition formation:

1. social ties - connections between organisations
2. conducive organizational structures - structures that enable collaboration
3. ideology, culture, and identity - shared ideas
4. institutional environment - opportunities and threats
5. resources - pooling resources or competing

Coalition formation - intra-/inter-organisational factors

Coalition formation - intra-/inter-organisational factors

- commonalities and connections between organisations
 - ‘plentiful resources and congruent ideologies’ (2015)
 - overlapping collective identities (e.g., Memorial and Sakharov Centre)
- ideological compatibility (a necessary condition?)
 - splits within movement (e.g., TERF vs. inclusive feminist groups) by ‘minor’ differences
 - others accommodate ...

Coalition formation - intra-/inter-organisational factors

- related to opportunity structures
 - opportunities - general or specific openings for mobilisation or movement activism
 - e.g., northern Ireland civil rights groups found international partners in late 1960s partly due to generally high social mobilisation — access to others'/more/shared resources
 - threats:
 - e.g., government repression often drives organisations to collaborate (e.g., For Fair Elections movement in Russia)

Coalition formed amid government repression

For Fair Elections (Russia, 2011-2012) - strange bedfellows

- related to opportunity structures
 - institutional arrangements:
 - Obach (2010) suggests that U.S. governmental separation of labor and environmental protection into two separate policy arenas inhibits collaboration of labor and environmental groups even when issues are of interest to both.
- Free space facilitates the organization of coalitions:

settings within a community or movement that are removed from the direct control of dominant groups, are voluntarily participated in, and generate the cultural challenge that precedes or accompanies political mobilization” (Polletta, 1999: 1).

Coalition formation - summary and 'potential'

Grouping	Factors
Intra-org	exclusive vs. multiple affiliations	any bridging social ties?
	broad organisational goals	e.g., bridging frames
	strong organisation	division (and availability) of labour, professional leaders, (at least some) hierarchy
Inter-org	commonalities	available resources, overlapping collective identities ideological compatibility	factions vs. willingness to accommodate Opportunity structure	opportunities	free space
	threats
	institutional arrangements

What's the coalition potential of movement cases you know of? Have they formed enduring and/or event coalitions?

Risks of coalition formation

- where there is disparity/imbalance...
 - resource-rich organisations may try to control resource-poor partner organisations

Coalitions and movement outcomes (2015)

radical flank effects - dynamics between (relatively) moderate and (relatively) radical parts of a movement and their target(s)

Radical flanks and (non/violent) tactics (Chenoweth Stephan 2011)

Pay attention to the mechanisms that Prof. Chenoweth specifies in her brief explanation

Radical flanks and (non/violent) tactics (Chenoweth Stephan 2011)

Pay attention to the mechanisms that Prof. Chenoweth specifies in her brief explanation

- nonviolent campaigns are better at eliciting broad and diverse support
- nonviolent campaigns create more defections among the opposition
- nonviolent campaigns have a broader set of tactics at their disposal
- nonviolent campaigns often maintain discipline even in the face of escalating oppression

Coalitions and movement outcomes (2015)

	Unified movement	Within-movement conflict	Radical flank effect
Open political opportunity structure	Political success: able to win political reforms from receptive elites	Lack of political success: may undermine movement mobilisation and prevent activists from achieving their political goals	Political success: Receptive elites willing to side with moderates against radicals ('positive radical flank effect'), making moderate reforms
		Within-movement conflict and radical flank effect
Closed political opportunity structure	Lack of political success: unlikely to win political gains due to lack of political elite receptiveness	Political success: initially unreceptive elites persuaded to side with moderates against radicals ('positive radical flank effect')

Movement responses - joining coalitions

Movement responses - partners

Movement responses - coalition efficacy coalition actions tend to be more effective

■ Antifa ■ FFF ■ LG ■ PEGIDA ■ Identitarians ■ Querdenker

Movement responses - party allies

Movement has political party allies

Explanatory note

Data table

Protest events with party involvement, by orientation

30 European countries, 2000-2015 (PoIDem)

How have German political parties responded to anti-Corona street protests?

What do you recall from the height of the pandemic? How did parties (in Germany and elsewhere) respond to mobilisation?

Types of party responses

A. Heinze (2018) on party reactions to radical parties (somewhat compelled to react):

Disengage

1. ignore
2. legal restrictions
3. cordon sanitaire (blocking coalitions)
4. demonise
5. defuse
6. hold

Engage

7. adopt (co-opt) policies
8. collaborate (executive, legislative, electoral) [national, regional, local – e.g., cooperation with AfD at lower levels]

Types of party responses

A. S. Heinze and Weisskircher (2022) on party responses to movements (not necessarily compelled to react):

- dismissive: ignore or disregard the movement
- accommodative: legitimate or even collaborate with the movement
- adversarial: oppose/challenge the movement

Heinze and Weisskricher (2022) - response options

Heinze and Weisskricher (2022) - response options

Level	Action	Description
Formal level	legal restrictions	most exclusionary possibility: e.g., bans, forced dissolution, event restrictions
	counterprotest	parties can mobilise counterdemonstrations against pariah protest tolerate	neutral acceptance of the right to protest, even for those that are regarded as pariahs; passive option
	cooperate	act cooperatively with protest group; mobilise support base
Substantive level	ignore	disregard, refuse to comment on protest demonise	portray the actor as extreme, dangerous, irrational, or beyond the pale defuse	downplay protest issue importance, shift public attention to other issue(s)
	debate	acknowledges the importance of an issue put forward by the protestors, with parties discussing different policy positions
	adopt	adopting positions from protest arena becomes attractive if party considers the issue particularly relevant for competition, hoping to gain electoral advantage

Heinze and Weisskricher (2022) - findings

Formal level - response to Querdenken

Party	Legal Restrictions	Counterprotest	Tolerate	Cooperate
CDU	Yes	No	Yes	No
SPD	Yes	Yes	Yes	No
Greens	Yes	Yes	Yes	No
Left	Yes	Yes	Yes	No
FDP	Yes	No	Yes	No
AfD	No	No	Yes	Yes

Substantive level - response to Querdenken

Party	Ignore	Demonise	Defuse	Debate	Adopt
CDU	No	Yes	No	Yes	No
SPD	No	Yes	No	Yes	No
Greens	No	Yes	No	Yes	No
Left	No	Yes	No	Yes	No
FDP	No	Yes	No	Yes	No
AfD	No	Yes	No	Yes	Yes

what about movement responses/approaches to parties?

(is it as relevant? does it matter? movements are not as empowered as parties) is the epitome of social movement

'success' becoming a party?

Questions about movements next meeting: (1) How has the state generally responded? (2) Do state responses focus more on the movement's tactics than on its political demands? (3) Do different state institutions respond differently? (4) Has the state's response changed significantly over time? (5) Do state authorities provide institutional channels through which the movement can pursue its goals? (6) Do participants often face coercive state responses? (7) Has the movement adapted its tactics in response to policing or legal actions? (8) Have state responses more strengthened or weakened the movement?
